PROJECT PROFILE

PROJECT INFORMATION

When Herman Miller, Inc. relocated their offices from the Dallas Design District to the uptown area on McKinney Avenue, the space they selected offered some interesting flooring challenges. 2811 McKinney Avenue is a mixed use office complex built in 1984. Herman Miller designs, builds and distributes some of the most sophisticated furniture in the world. While the space Herman Miller leased is on the ground floor, most of the space is on a suspended slab. The existing concrete floor had elevation changes in excess of 3" across the 5,400 square feet of area. The requirement of the interior finish was to produce a high end refined look specified by TVS Design.

Bomanite Licensee, Texas Bomanite achieved the specified design with the Bomanite Modena SL polished concrete system that produced a flat floor by installing self-leveling concrete overlay to produce an acceptable concrete canvas to polish. The finished product is a stunning showpiece that complements the modern sophistication of the new office space.
